WHAT: "How To End a Movie," a sharp dissection of the impact the end of a movie has on the rest of the movie.WHO: Film-obsessed YouTubers, Now You See It.WHY WE CARE: While it's clearly more satisfying to walk out a movie that stuck the landing, rather than one that just kinda went through the motions, this video pinpoints the sometimes subtle elements that make up that distinction. The crew from Now You See It starts by comparing the final shots of Alfred Hitchcock's Psycho and Gus van Sant's 1998 remake to show why one is far more powerful and upsetting than the other. (Co.Create is pretty certain you can guess which one is which.) The rest of the video examines some of the greatest endings ever, and encompasses several types of ending, to give a broad overview of what makes them work well. Now where's the video on how best to end quick hit blog posts? Have you ever wondered if you're in the wrong relationship? While relationships can have their fair share of ups and downs, it's important to be able to recognize if your relationship is on the path to success or is heading nowhere fast. Fortunately, there are eight top signs that can let you know if you're in a dead end relationship so you can cut your losses and find someone new. One of the clear signs that you're in a dead end relationship is that you're simply not happy. For instance, if you feel unfulfilled by your partner and don't find joy in your connection, these are key indicators that your relationship is destined to fail. Relationships can have highs and lows, but if being with your partner isn't something that makes you smile at the end of the day, the best step is to end this relationship sooner rather than later. If you're feeling apathetic about your partner, this is another top indicator that your relationship is going to fail. Your connection with your partner should be a source of excitement and intrigue in your life, but if you derive little pleasure from your relationship and are feeling indifferent, your next step should be to break up. Life is too short to be bored with the person you're with, so it's time to end this dead end relationship. If you're wondering if you're in a dead end relationship, you should take a closer look at your reasons for being with your partner in the first place. Many people stay with their partner long after their relationship has reached its expiration date because they're afraid to be alone. For example, if you're with your partner because you think you can't do any better, you're worried about being single, or you think you've put in too much time to end things with him or her, then you're clearly in a dead end relationship. In a happy and healthy relationship, you should wholeheartedly want to be with your partner for the right reasons, and if you're not, then you're in the wrong relationship. Do you seek out opportunities to spend time with people who aren't your partner? If you're going out of your way to make plans with others so you don't have to spend one-on-one time together, this is clearly an indicator that you're in a dead end relationship. When you don't enjoy being alone as a couple and try to limit the amount of time that you're together, you're better off without this person. If being with him or her feels like a chore rather than a choice, this relationship should end. In many cases, the feeling that something isn't right can help clue you in that you're in a dead end relationship. Your gut feeling that you're with the wrong person shouldn't be ignored, as your instincts are key in determining who you should be with and what you want out of a relationship. If you don't feel as though your relationship is right, the right thing is to break up with him or her. Another key sign that you're in a dead end relationship is that you and your partner aren't on the same page when it comes to major life choices. For instance, if you truly want to have children one day and your partner doesn't see kids in his or her future, this major discrepancy is going to cause your relationship to fail. Neither you nor your partner should have to sacrifice key values and priorities in order to make your connection last, and if your goals don't align, you're clearly in a dead end relationship. Are you longing to be with someone who isn't your partner? A top indicator that you're in a dead end relationship is that your partner isn't the person with whom you want to be. And when you're prioritizing someone else both in your mind and in your heart, your relationship is bound to self-destruct. For example, if you're pining after someone else and find yourself daydreaming about being with him or her instead, this is the wakeup call you need to end your current relationship and start a new one. If you find that you're not your authentic self in your relationship, this should help you to recognize that you're in a dead end relationship. For instance, if you find that you're playing a role when you're with your partner, don't say what's really on your mind, and are hesitant to share anything about your past, this isn't healthy or sustainable. When you're with the right person, you'll feel completely comfortable around him or her and won't be afraid to express your true thoughts and feelings. The franchise will return for one last ride in Fast & Furious 11. When 'The Fast and Furious' was released way back in 2001, no one could have predicted it would spawn eight sequels, a spin-off movie, and become one of the highest-grossing Hollywood franchises of all time. With Fast & Furious 9 speeding into theaters next May, the franchise is showing no signs of slowing down. But we now know when Fast & Furious will reach the end of the road.According to Deadline Hollywood, Fast & Furious will conclude after two more main movies. We already knew Fast & Furious 10 was in the pipeline, but Vin Diesel has previously hinted the story will be so big that it could be split into two parts. Justin Lin, who directed 'The Fast and the Furious: Tokyo Drift', 'Fast & Furious', 'Fast Five', 'Fast & Furious 6', and 'Fast & Furious 9,' will reportedly be in the director's chair for Fast & Furious 10 and 11. Universal Pictures Universal Pictures The final two films will allegedly be produced by Vin Diesel through his One Race Films company. Vin Diesel, Michelle Rodriguez, Ludacris, Tyrese Gibson, Nathalie Emmanuel, Sung Kang and Jordana Brewster are expected to reprise their roles, but one question remains: will Dwayne Johnson return for the franchise's finale following his feud with Vin Diesel?While the central story will wrap up in Fast & Furious 11, this doesn't mean the franchise will end for good. The film's first spin-off, 'Hobbs & Shaw' grossed $750 million worldwide, so Universal Studios will want to continue expanding the Fast & Furious cinematic universe as long as it keeps printing money. Universal Pictures Universal Pictures A Hobbs & Shaw sequel and female-focused spin-off movie are already in development, and the animated Spy Racers show recently started its second season on Netflix. Before Fast 9 was delayed until 2021, Fast 10 was scheduled to roar into theaters on April 2, 2021, but a new release date has not been announced.Considering that Fast & Furious 9 will reportedly blast off into space, we're curious to see how the tenth and eleventh films will up the ante. But whether you love or hate Fast & Furious, the films have always featured cool cars for gearheads. We're looking forward to seeing the new Toyota GR Supra, Ford Mustang Shelby GT350, and a widebody version of Dom's Dodge Charger in action on the big screen when Fast & Furious 9 releases next year. Universal Pictures Universal Pictures Universal Pictures Hulton Archive If it feels like the winter storms won't end, natural disasters seem to be getting stronger than ever, or that you might not be able to take another month of having to stay inside and mask up from a pandemic, cozy up with an apocalyptic or post-apocalyptic movie marathon and you'll be reminded how good you have it. Whether it's an asteroid hurtling towards earth, a world-wide zombie making pandemic, space invaders, a nuclear war, or something that's the result of climate change, we can't help but be fascinated by the end of all things. So gather up your friends or your roomies and cozy up with a hot drink, some spooky snacks, and get ready to be on the edge of your seat! But don't worry, these nail-biters typically end up with the characters a little worse for wear, but the earth safe and sound. So we can all breathe a huge sigh of relief. Cause that's what we want to know (and love so much about these movies) is that at the end of the day, to we'll all come together as a community, protect our families, and will survive whatever comes our way...even a zombie apocalypse! It reels you in and convinces you to dedicate the next one, two, or even three hours of your life to going down the rabbit hole of the movie director's imagined world. But arguably most memorable — even more so than a sex scene — is the final scene of a movie. It's the last impression you have and can leave you with a lingering feeling of wanting more. And it can completely change your viewing experience. It can also be the best scene of a movie for that very reason. Whether it's because of an iconic song or a total plot twist, all these movies left us both fully satisfied but also hungry for more. Each of these 15 films saved the best for last.Warning: This slideshow contains spoilers. I mean, obviously, it's the last scene of the film, guys. But they're so good, you could honestly know the ending and still thoroughly enjoy the whole movie again and again. Trust me.
