Dear Traffic Talk: While driving on the Hollywood Freeway, I observed and drifted out of his lane several times. Because of the alert driving on the part of the motorists who were around him, he managed to avoid an accident before exiting the freeway. As luck would have it, I had to use the same offramp. I eventually managed to get a good look at the driver, as well as his female passenger. Much to my surprise, the driver did not appear intoxicated as I first suspected. He was just very elderly. Should an elderly driver, whose driving skills have deteriorated to the point of endangering other motorists, be reported? If yes, who should I contact? And what is the phone driving skills have deteriorated to the point of endangering other motorists, be reported? If yes, who should I contact? And what is the phone driving skills have deteriorated to the point of endangering other motorists. number?Thank you.Dani Schultz, North Hollywood*Dear Dani:You can report unsafe drivers to the California Highway Patrol's Southern Division headquarters in Glendale at (818) 240-8200, said CHP Sgt. A. James. The operator will direct your call to the appropriate CHP office in Los Angeles County.James said to be prepared to give the following information:* A description of what the unsafe motorist was doing.* Where and when the unsafe motorist was driving erratically.* A physical description of the vehicle. A form letter will be sent to the driver advising them that they were seen driving erratically by other motorists and that they need to take better precautions, James said. However, since the infraction was not committed in the presence of a CHP officer or other authorities, no citation will be issued, he said. In some cases, the CHP may report unsafe drivers to the Department of Motor Vehicles for reevaluation, James said. They will be subjected to a driving test and if the DMV deems their driving skills not safe enough for California roads, their licenses may be suspended, he said.****Dear Traffic Talk: I have a two-part question regarding what to do when an emergency vehicle, such as a police car or an ambulance, approaches. On city streets, how far must I pull over when there is an approaching emergency vehicle which is sounding a siren with flashing red lights? Also, on the freeway, what should I do when an emergency vehicle is behind me? H.B. The answer to the first question is "as far right as it's practical," said Sgt. Ernie Sanchez of the California Highway Patrol. Sanchez added that there is no need to pull over to the curb on the right. Because of this, problems arise when motorists stop in the middle of the road or, even worse, pull over to the left, Sanchez said. Your second answer is simply to move as far from the No. 1 lane on the freeway as is practical so that the emergency vehicle can safely pass on the left, Sanchez said. There's no need to slow down since emergency vehicles usually travel at a faster speed than commuters, he said. Again, problems arise when motorists either move to the left or, in some cases, come to a complete stop.*Traffic Talk appears Fridays in The Times Valley Edition. What few people realize is just how much power the DMV has to suspend or revoke a person's privilege to drive. Independent of any action taken by a court, the DMV has to suspend or revoke a person's driver from the road is if that person becomes a Negligent or Incompetent Operator. The DMV can identify a person as a Negligent or Incompetent Operator for a number of reasons, but here we discuss the topic of Road Rage. Road Rage is commonly defined as: "Aggressive or angry behavior by a driver of an automobile or other road vehicle which includes rude gestures, verbal insults, physical threats or dangerous driving methods targeted toward another driver in an effort to intimidate or release frustration." Road Rage is seated in the emotion of the errant driver and, as we all know emotions can run high on today's freeways. Violence, injuries and death are often a consequence of Road Rage. As a result, the DMV considers Road Rage to be dangerous to the motoring public and will work aggressively to remove such a driver from the road. What is the History of Road Rage? Angry and aggressive drivers have existed since the invention of the wheel; however, the term "Road Rage? Angry and aggressive drivers from a Los Angeles based television station in 1987 and 1988 when a series of random shootings in the LA Basin were coined Road Rage. Shortly thereafter, The Automobile Club (AAA) produced pamphlets instructing its members on methods to deal with and avoid Road Rage. History has shown that young males are typically more prone to Road Rage than other groups of drivers. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) has identified 33 year old males as being predominantly responsible for 96% of Road Rage incidents. It is also thought that drivers who adorn their vehicles with bumper stickers and territory markers are more prone to Road Rage. The AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety estimates that more than 1,200 incidents of Road Rage are reported each year. Clearly the numbers of actual incidents must be much higher as many events are increased by 51%. There is every reason to believe that the numbers continue to rise. NHTSA noted in a review on the subject, "If it seems that there are more cases of rude and outrageous behavior on the road now than in the past, the observation is correct, if for no other reason than there are more drivers driving more miles on the same roads than ever before." How is Road Rage Reported to the DMV? Essentially, there are two ways that the California Department of Motor Vehicles learns of a Road Rage incident: Law Enforcement Referral: Without question, the most prevalent means by which the DMV learns of a Road Rage incident is by way of a referral from a Law Enforcement Officer. Police officers respond every day to reports of Road Rage (Also referred to as Highway Violence). In some instances, the law enforcement contact results in the arrest of one or more parties, but very often the facts to not rise to the level of criminal activity. Any time the DMV receives a referral from a Law Enforcement Officer that a particular driver has been involved in a Road Rage or "High Violence" incident; the department will immediately identify that driver as Negligent Operator and begin the process of removing that person from the road. Private Party Referral: Any person may report an incident of Road Rage to the California DMV. Using the PDF form here any person can report another driver to the DMV. As long as the form is signed by the reporting party, the DMV must investigate the accused driver to determine if they are a Negligent or Incompetent driver. When filling out the reporting party, the DMV must investigate the accused driver, you can take the test here. What Can I do to Protect my Driver License? If you have learned that the California DMV is identifying you as a Negligent Operator because of an incident of Road Rage, the preservation of your driver license will depend on your driver license will depend on your driver license? I'm the president and CEO of California DmV of course, is an enormously powerful entity that has the power to grant drivers licesness and to take them away. One of the most prolific reasons that the DMV will take a person as a negligent or incompetent driver. And one of the most common or increasing reasons that the DMV will identify a person as a negligent or incompetent driver. And one of the most common or increasing reasons that the DMV will identify a person as a negligent or incompetent driver. road rage, also known as highway violence. Road rage is an incident where a person loses their temper and by way of hand gestures or verbal insults or dangerous driving, they create a dangerous situation. And the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reports that there are at least 1,200 reported incidences of road rage each year. And we know that those numbers are much, much higher because countless numbers of those incidences go unreported. The reality is, is that if you have committed an act of road rage, the DMV will think that you are unfit to be on the road because you can't control yourself. And you create a hazard to the public. As a result, the DMV will move to revoke your driving privilege and take you off the road. So that's what road rage is. Now, many times these things are taken out of context. Many times the evidence is skewed. And so if we can help you, we'll be right there for you. If you have any other questions or would like information, give us a call or visit our website.
